About the Annual Report

For the Society of Fellows in the Humanities, the 1994-95 academic year brought continued success both programmatically and organizationally. The brown bag lunch talks and dinner lectures continued to attract sizable audiences and often sparked interdisciplinary discussion and debate. The fellowship competition, which again garnered in excess of five hundred applications, brought four new fellows to the Society to teach in Columbia College’s general education program and to pursue independent research. With the addition of the incoming fellows, the Society will have shepherded one hundred and eight humanities Ph.Ds. through its program since its founding in 1976 with grants from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the William R. Kenan Charitable Trust. Further details of the fellows’ teaching and publications, as well as reports on other activities sponsored by the Society, are reflected in the pages of this annual report.

For the first time in over a decade, the Society is blessed with co-chairs. In their "Report from the Chairmen," Karl Kroeber and Esther Pasztory present a broad picture of the Society’s historical situation in relation to current social and academic trends. Following this report is a list of the Society’s senior faculty governing board, expanded for the upcoming year from thirty-six to thirty-eight members. The brown bag lunch programs—including a fall series on multiculturalism developed in collaboration with the Heyman Center for the Humanities, the continuation of the popular States of the Disciplines series, and the inauguration of a new series on Death—are reported, as are details of the evening lecture series. A summary of the fellows’ teaching shows that, in addition to the seven fellows in residence each teaching in the core curriculum, four fellows developed and taught seminars in their fields of specialization.

For the fourth year in a row, more than five hundred applicants have entered the Society’s fellowship competition—a reflection, in part, of a job market that continues to be difficult for recent humanities Ph.Ds. Detailed applicant profiles appear on pages 12-18.

Many of the Society’s alumni fellows sent word of their accomplishments for inclusion in this year’s "News from the Fellows." Alumni fellows, now numbering one hundred and one, continue to be involved with the Society through participation in the various programs and in the reading of the fellowship applications during the competition. It is, in fact, the many successes sustained by the Society’s fellows that bear long-term testimony to the work of the Society of Fellows.

Marsha M. Manns
Director
A Report from the Chairmen

In terms of its intellectual programs, fellowship competition, and basic financial position, the Society experienced another successful year in 1994-95. Details of this success appear in subsequent pages. Here, however, we present a broader picture of the Society’s historical situation in relation to current social and intellectual changes transforming academia, followed by an outline of our view of action the Society might undertake to assure its continuing significance in fostering excellence in humanistic learning, and, above all, in demonstrating and affirming productive interactions between advanced research and undergraduate teaching.

The Society was founded two decades ago with aid from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, which gave money to Columbia and several other universities to fund postdoctoral fellowships for outstanding young humanists who were unable to find academic employment upon receiving their doctorates. The disastrous job situation to which the Mellon foundation then responded by these generous grants in many humanistic fields was less severe than it is at present. In English and most foreign language fields, for example, the number of tenure-track positions nationwide has, in the past six years, declined by forty-five to fifty percent. This glum economic scene is made worse by certain socio-intellectual trends, which may roughly be lumped together under the rubric of a downgrading of the significance of humanistic studies.

The Society, we believe, can—and should—work to reverse this trend. To explain how and why, we must review briefly the peculiar character and functioning of the Society. It was intended to foster productive relations between undergraduate teaching and specialized advanced research, to enhance the role of the humanities in Columbia College’s general education program while developing the research skills of distinguished young scholars. The Society’s success in this dual role is attested to by the fact that over one hundred fellows have taught in excess of three hundred sections of general education courses in Columbia College and have subsequently entered into impressive academic careers.

The Society is effective because it is a multi-disciplinary body that encourages cross-disciplinary thinking and practice and regularly serves as a discussion center for faculty and fellows transgressing limiting boundaries established by departmentalization and conventional field definitions. Moreover, the Society is intrinsically internationalist in character, not only bringing together scholar-teachers from diverse disciplines but also from different nations and national traditions.

These characteristics enable the Society to contribute significantly to the unique form of Columbia College’s general education programs—the teaching in small discussion sessions of communally agreed upon materials. This form emphasizes the learning process for teachers as well as students, because by discussing subjects outside the range of their specializations instructors enrich the context of their expertise while students learn through classroom debates how to conduct intense, impassioned, but civilized intellectual discourse. By carrying this practical interdisciplinarity into the interchanges, both formal and informal, which constitute the activities of the Society both for fellows and participating faculty, the Society develops practically a relation between advanced specialized research and basic undergraduate teaching which continually defines and redefines the fundamental functions of humanistic thinking in contemporary society.

The Society therefore is uniquely fitted to lead the way into a modernized humanistic training peculiarly appropriate to the needs of our contemporary world, and it should, therefore, extend its program of postdoctoral fellowships which emphasize the productive interaction of specialized research and general education for undergraduates. To this end we have, during the past year, begun to seek out various possibilities for increasing the Society’s strength as a postdoctoral center—one that will enhance Columbia’s humanistic departments in a time of financial stringencies. Working in conjunction with the office of University Development and Alumni Relations and with selected departments, we have begun to explore ways in which new kinds of postdoctoral fellowships might be defined to attract funding from private foundations. We are also investigating cooperation with other programs and institutions interested in postdoctoral fellowships—outside the university consulting with the Getty Grant Program’s Fellowship in the History of Art and the Humanities for Scholars from Central/Eastern Europe, and within the university working together with the Dharam Hinduja Indic Research Center.

In 1995-96, the Society’s thirty-eight member faculty governing board will continue to re-evaluate the Society’s mission, seeking in particular to develop its contribution to Columbia College’s expanding core curriculum program and to explore new ways of assuring the continuing leadership of Columbia in humanistic thought and practice.

Brown Bag Lunch Programs

The brown bag lunch program continued to flourish in 1994-95. Seventeen programs—including a fall series on multiculturalism developed in collaboration with the Heyman Center for the Humanities, the continuation of the successful States of the Disciplines series and the inauguration of a new series on Death—were offered to broad and inquisitive audiences.

The fall series on Identity and Identification Across the Disciplines opened with a discussion by Michael Taussig, Professor of Anthropology, Columbia University, focusing on issues of culture and anthropology. Jeffrey Olick, Assistant Professor of Sociology, Columbia University, followed with "Is a Politics of Regret Possible? Normalizing the German Past Before and After 1989." Four additional programs included: William Theodore de Bary's (John Mitchell Mason Professor of the University, Emeritus) thinking on "Multiculturalism and the Core Curriculum;" a lively discussion by Columbia College students on "How Multicultural Studies Affect Students' Lives;" Danielle Haase-Dubosc's (Director, Reid Hall, Paris) reflections on "Enlightenment 'Universals' and Multiculturalism;" and Robert Pollack, Professor of Biological Sciences and Priscilla Wald, Assistant Professor of English and Comparative Literature, both of Columbia, speaking on "The Two Cultures: Representations of Human Diversity." Closing the series was an informal discussion on the subject of identity, chaired by Esther Pasztory, Co-chair of the Society of Fellows and Professor of Art History and Archaeology.

Three first-year fellows were introduced to the Society through brown presentations of their work in the first semester. Jeffrey M. Bale, Mellon Fellow in History, spoke on "In the Shadow of Mussolini and Hitler? New Approaches to the History of Neo-Fascism in Europe." Then, Deborah Diamond, Mellon Fellow in Political Science, gave a paper entitled "Contract and Community: The Questionable Power of Agreement;" followed by Michael J. Anderson, Mellon Fellow in Classics, on "Aineias and the Early Greek Epic Tradition."

Continuing interest in the panel discussion series developed in recent years by the Society resulted in the creation of a new series on Death that will continue into 1995-96. Bruce Jennings, Executive Director of the Hastings Center, launched the series with a thoughtful presentation of his work on "Dying and the Limits of Self Sovereignty." Several weeks later, fellow Jeffrey Bale teamed up with Gillian Lindt, Acting Dean, School of General Studies, and Professor of Religion, Columbia, for the second program in the Death series on "Cults and Violence." Tenth and eleventh programs in the ever popular States of the Disciplines examined "French Studies" and "Music."

All of the lunch talks are held on Thursdays in the Heyman Center and are open to the university community.

Last Rites: Dying and the Limits of Self Sovereignty. Bruce Jennings, Executive Director, Hastings Center. First in a Series

February 23  STATES OF THE DISCIPLINES: French Studies. Discussants: R. Howard Bloch, Chairman, French and Romance Philology; Michael Riffaterre, University Professor; and Marina Van Zuilen, Assistant Professor, French and Romance Philology. Moderator: Peter Consenstein, Assistant Professor, Modern Languages, Borough of Manhattan Community College

March 2  DEATH
Cults and Violence. A discussion including Gillian Lindt, Acting Dean, School of General Studies, and Professor, Religion Department, Columbia University; Jeffrey Bale, Mellon Fellow in History, Society of Fellows. Second in a series

March 9  Aineias and the Early Greek Epic Tradition. Michael J. Anderson, Mellon Fellow in Classics, Society of Fellows
March 23  STATES OF THE DISCIPLINES: Music. Discussants: Joseph Dubiel, Associate Professor of Music, Columbia University; Daniel Ferguson, Assistant Professor of Music, Columbia University; Elaine Sisman, Professor of Music, Columbia University. Moderator: Alicyn Warren, Mellon Fellow of Music, Society of Fellows

March 30  Representations of Urban Modernity. Discussants: Carla Cappetti, Associate Professor of English, CCNY-CUNY; David L. Pike, Mellon Fellow in French and Comparative Literature, Society of Fellows; and William Sharpe, Associate Professor of English, Barnard College, and alumnus, Society of Fellows

April 6  BAD ANGEL. Author HELEN BENEDICT (Associate Professor, School of Journalism, Columbia University) read from her new novel and discussed writing across ethnic lines

April 13  Mastering Slavery: Writing and Identity in Women’s Slave Narratives. Jennifer Fleischner, Visiting Scholar, Department of English and Comparative Literature, Columbia University
Dinner Meetings

Two evening lectures were presented to Society members and friends in 1994-95. James Watt, Brooke Russell Astor Senior Curator, Department of Asian Art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, gave a slide presentation on October 13. In the spring, Yosef Hayim Yerushalmi, Salo Wittmayer Baron Professor of Jewish History, spoke at the invitation of Society alumna, Naomi Diamant, now at the University of Illinois at Chicago, who served as the evening’s moderator. The recipients of the 1995-96 Mellon fellowships were announced at the April 4 event. Program details follow.

October 13

The Mongol Legacy In Chinese Art. James Watt, Brooke Russell Astor Senior Curator, Department of Asian Art, The Metropolitan Museum of Art

Moderator: Anning Jing, Mellon Fellow in Art History

1995

April 4

"SERVANTS OF KINGS AND NOT SERVANTS OF SERVANTS": Some Aspects of the Political History of the Jews. Yosef Hayim Yerushalmi, Salo Wittmayer Baron Professor of Jewish History, Culture and Society, and Director, Center for Israel and Jewish Studies, Columbia University

Moderator: Naomi Diamant
Fellows' Teaching

Fellows in the Society devote one-half of their time to teaching. Usually, each teaches one section per semester in the undergraduate general education curriculum. In the second year of the fellowship, fellows may, in addition to the teaching requirement in general education, develop and teach a one-semester course in their area of specialization. Each fellow maintains an office in the Heyman Center where students come for consultation.

Seven fellows in residence taught the following courses during the 1994-95 academic year:

Since the Society's inception in 1976-77, one hundred and four fellows have taught 333 courses in the general education program.
Twentieth Annual Fellowship Competition for
1995-96 Fellowships

Five hundred and two applicants entered the twentieth annual fellowship competition. As in past years, the deadline for receipt of applications was October 15. Reports generated by the database system designed to support the competition provide detailed profiles of the applicant pool beginning on page 12.

After thirteen incomplete applications were eliminated, the first round of readings began in early November. Each dossier received two readings by a combination of fellows and governing board members. As a result of the scoring process inherent in the readings, four hundred and six were eliminated from the competition on December 1, 1994.

Eighty applicants remained after the first cut for further evaluation by a selection committee of eight board members—Victoria de Grazia, Patricia Grieve, Robert Hymes, Natalie Kampen, Karl Kroeber, Martin Meisel, Thomas Pogge, and Dorothea Von Mucke. The committee divided into two groups of four with each group reading forty dossiers and presenting its top choices to the other group. Eighteen candidates were offered an interview; the remaining sixty-two candidates were cut on January 25, 1995.

The governing board voted to schedule the eighteen interviews for Friday, February 17, and Saturday, February 18, at the Heyman Center. The committee of eight, joined by Esther Pasztory, conducted the interview sessions.

Four fellowships were available for 1995-96. Offers were made to and accepted by: Linda C.A. Przybyszewski, History, Stanford University; Scott A. Sandage, History, Rutgers University; Leo K. Shin, Asian Studies, Princeton University; and Anne B. Waters, Anthropology and History, University of Michigan.

A letter of March 2 notified the remaining interviewees that the Society was unable to offer a fellowship for the upcoming year.

The four new fellows, whose appointments began July 1, 1995, join three second-year fellows—Michael Anderson, Classics; Jeffrey Bale, History; and Deborah Diamond, Political Science.

News from the Fellows

April Alliston (Fellow 1988-89) teaches in the Department of Comparative Literature at Princeton University, and in 1994-95 offered courses on Gothic fiction and on "The Enlightenment and Romanticism." "Female Sexuality and the Referent of Eighteenth-Century Realisms" is being published this fall in Realism, Sexuality, and Gender, ed. Christopher Prendergast and Margaret Cohen (University of Minnesota Press). Works in progress are: Virtue's Faults; or, Women's Correspondences in Eighteenth-Century Fiction (Stanford University Press); a cultural biography of James Fenimore Cooper (Addison-Wesley, with Professor Pamela Schirmeister of New York University); and a new edition, with critical introduction, of The Recess by Sophia Lee (University Press of Kentucky), an English Gothic historical novel originally published in 1783-85.

At the 1994 MLA convention Professor Alliston chaired a panel on "Women's Testimony and Problems of Proof," presenting a paper on "Gender and the Rhetoric of Evidence in Enlightenment Historical Narratives." With Professor Schirmeister, she gave two lectures in April 1995 on James Fenimore Cooper and problems in biographical evidence, one for the Faculty Colloquium on Psychoanalysis and the Humanities at New York University, and another for the Seminar in American Literary History at the American Antiquarian Society. They also presented a paper on Cooper and women writers at the annual James Fenimore Cooper Conference at SUNY Oneonta in July 1995.

In his first year at the Society, Michael Anderson (Fellow 1994-96) contributed to the brown bag lunch series a lecture entitled "Aineias and the Early Greek Epic Tradition," also presented to the classics department of the University of Toronto. He completed and submitted for review a paper on poetic traditions influencing the twenty-third book of the Iliad, and he began preparing a monograph based on his Ph.D. dissertation, Images of the Ilioupersis in Early Greek Art and Literature. In addition to teaching fall and spring sections of Literature Humanities, he presented a paper on the Odyssey at one of the course's weekly staff meetings and served as a judge in the 1995 Handler essay competition.

Professor Apter's New World project of rethinking syncretism in the African diaspora has taken him to the Dominican Republic, where he focused on representations of race and class in popular Catholicism, and will take him to Cuba, where he will investigate the Yoruba based religion of Santería under Castro.

During the 1994-95 academic year, Jeffrey M. Bale (Fellow 1994-96) taught two semesters of Contemporary Civilization in Columbia's core curriculum program. For the Society of Fellows, he presented a talk "In The Shadow of Mussolini and Hitler? New Approaches to the History of Neo-Fascism in Europe" and both organized and participated (along with Gillian Lindt, Acting Dean, School of General Studies, and Professor of Religion) in a panel on "Cults and Violence." He submitted one article for publication, and is currently working on transforming his Berkeley Ph.D. dissertation into a book manuscript entitled The "Black" Terrorist International: Neo-Fascist Paramilitary Networks and the "Strategy of Tension" in Italy, 1966-1970.

Renate Blumenfeld-Kosinski (Fellow 1981-83) spent part of last summer as a visitor at the Norwegian Academy of Sciences and Letters in Oslo. She also read a paper at the International Hildegard of Bingen Congress in Wiesbaden. It will be published later this spring under the title "Das Konzept von Frau und Mann bei Hildegard von Bingen und Christine de Pizan" in Mystik in Geschichte und Gegenwart. Her article "Jean Le Fèvre's Livre de Leesce: Praise or Blame of Women?" appeared in the July 1994 issue of Speculum. At the AHA Convention in Chicago she presented a paper on childbirth miracles in medieval France. She is currently completing a Norton Critical Edition of selected works by Christine de Pizan. She spent the spring as a visiting professor at the University of Pittsburgh where she has now accepted a tenured position in the Department of French and Italian.

During the past year, Elizabeth Bowen (Fellow 1976-77) participated in Radcliffe's Advanced Fiction Workshop.

Mary Baine Campbell (Fellow 1985-87) was awarded tenure last May at Brandeis University, where she also directs the Creative Writing Program. This December, she was awarded an NEH Fellowship which, combined with a sabbatical, will allow her to spend the next year completing a book begun long ago at the Society: Wonder and Science: The Literatures of Travel, Fiction and Anthropology, 1558-1726. She also hopes to complete a second book of poetry. Essays are forthcoming (sometime before the millennium) in several collections and journals, on Dante's Purgatorio, Kepler's Somnium, or Lunar Astronomy, John Bulwer's seventeenth-century Anthropometamorphosis, the problem of the Americas for Renaissance humanist historiography, and the New World writing of French Renaissance cosmographer André Thevet.

Professor Campbell helped design a team-taught interdisciplinary graduate seminar for the Graduate Consortium in Women's Studies at Radcliffe called "Gender, Representation and Social Control," and in other interdisciplinary activity was invited to present work to and discuss pedagogy with the NEH-funded ISIS seminar at the University of Maine, a faculty group working to mount a set of interdisciplinary undergraduate pilot courses that involve the materials and issues of both scientific and humanistic disciplines. She is also working, as much as time allows, to help the Bennington Academic Freedom Committee, a group of faculty and alumnae formed to protest and resist the summary firing of a third of the Bennington College faculty last summer.

David Castriota (Fellow 1982-84) is now at Sarah Lawrence College. Last year he delivered papers at the College Art Association Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America and the American Philological Association. One of these, on the pedimental sculptures of the Parthenon, will be published in a forthcoming issue of the journal Source; the other, on art under the early Athenian democracy, will appear in a forthcoming collection of essays, Democracy 2500: Questions and Challenges. He has also contributed an article on wall painting in the ancient Near East for the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Near Eastern Archaeology. In June, he will have a new book coming out from Princeton University Press, The Ara Pacis Augustae and the Imagery of Abundance in Later Greek and Early Roman Imperial Art. This past fall he received a Hewlett-Mellon Grant for release time from teaching to develop a new course on Hellenism in western Asia and the emergence of Islamic art. In conjunction with the course, this spring he organized a colloquium at Sarah Lawrence on early Islamic art and culture. His wife, Jill Meredith, has just accepted a position as Curator of European Art at the Meade Art Museum of Amherst College.

During the 1994-1995 academic year, Peter A. Coclanis (Fellow 1983-84) published several articles, including: (co-authored with John Komlos) "Nutrition and Economic Development in Post-Reconstruction South Carolina: An Anthropometric View," Social Science History 19 (Spring 1995); (co-authored with David L. Carlton) "The Uninventive South? A Quantitative Look at Region and American Inventiveness," Technology and Culture 36 (April 1995); "The Poetics of American Agriculture: The U.S. Rice Industry in International Perspective," Agricultural History 69 (Spring 1995). He spoke at several scholarly meetings, and co-authored a paper delivered at the 1995 annual meeting of the American Economic Association. At the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill he continues as Associate Dean for General Education. During the summer of 1995, he used grants from the American Philosophical Society, the Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation, and UNC to conduct research in India, Myanmar, and Vietnam for a book on the international rice trade between about 1700 and 1940.

Lorraine Daston (Fellow 1979-80) spent the academic year 1994-95 on a Guggenheim Fellowship researching and writing, in collaboration with Peter Galison, a book on the history of the images (particularly photographs and maps) distinctive of scientific objectivity. Articles on "Fortuna and the Passions," "Enlightenment Calculations," and "How Probabilities Became Objective and Subjective" appeared in various journals in the past year. As of July 1995 she will be a director of the new Max Plank Institute for the History of Science in Berlin.

Mary Dearborn’s (Fellow 1986-88) latest book, Queen of Bohemia: The Life of Louise Bryant, will be published by Houghton Mifflin in fall 1995. Her next book, also to be published by Houghton Mifflin, is a biography of Norman Mailer, the second installment of a trilogy that began with her biography of Henry Miller (The Happiest Man Alive, 1991) and will conclude with a biography of Hemingway.
Since September 1995 Vidya Dehejia (Fellow 1984-86) has been Curator of South and Southeast Asian Art for the Arthur M. Sackler Gallery and the Freer Gallery which are the Asian art museums of the Smithsonian Institution located in Washington, DC. She looks after the permanent collections in her field at both museums, and plans and executes special exhibitions.

In addition, she published four gallery guides for the Florence and Herbert Irving Galleries for the Arts of South and Southeast Asia at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York: "Introducing India’s Art and Culture," "Understanding Buddhism and Buddhist Art," "Recognizing the Gods," and "Understanding Hinduism and Hindu Art." Currently, her Discourse in Early Buddhist Art: Visual Narratives of India, Munshiram Manoharlal Publishers, Delhi, is in press.

During 1994-95 academic year, Deborah Diamond (Fellow 1994-96) taught an experimental "track B" section of Contemporary Civilization. The course organizes texts thematically, rather than chronologically, and adds some new texts not traditionally taught in CC. Her own research over the year has included revising her dissertation, "The Role of Conscience in Defenses of Religious Liberty," for submission to a publisher, and writing a new paper, "Contract and Community: The Questionable Power of Agreement," which she presented during one of the Society’s brown bag lunch seminars. She will be giving a version of this paper at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association in September, as well as at Bryn Mawr College in the fall. Dr. Diamond has begun work on a new article, "Secular Public Sphere or Ecumenical Politics," which she plans to present at the Religious Research Association Meeting next fall in St. Louis.

In June of 1995, Cornell University Press published Laura Downs’s (Fellow 1987-88) book, Manufacturing Inequality. While awaiting this event, Professor Downs taught several courses in European history, ran the department’s graduate admissions program, and gave three talks on her new book project, "The End of Rural France: Visions of the land in industrial society, 1860-1970" — one at the New School, in New York City, and two at the University of Michigan’s Art Museum. In addition, she was invited to serve as historical consultant for a new television documentary series on World War One, "The Great War and the Shaping of our Century," being produced jointly by KCET (Los Angeles) and the BBC.
The high-point of this very interesting and exciting project came in mid-February, when Professor Downs flew out to Los Angeles (and away from the Ann Arbor winter!) in order to be interviewed (and filmed) as a "talking head" for five of the eight episodes.

Laura Downs will be spending the next academic year in Paris on a Fulbright Fellowship, doing the research for her new book on working-class people's perceptions of the loss of the countryside in modern France.

 tirelessly,

 tirelessly,

Anne Fryman (Fellow 1977-79) completed the co-translation and introduction to a memoir about the Russian writer, Isaac Babel by his second wife, A.N. Pirozh-Kova. Years At His Side was published in the Babel-Centennial issue of the Canadian Slavonic Papers, vol. XXXVI, nos. 1-2, 1994. Now that Professor Fryman has finished teaching she will continue trying to place the book with an American publisher.

 tirelessly,

In January Michele Hannoosh (Fellow 1982-85) took up her position as Professor of French at University College London. She continued preparing a major new edition of Delacroix's Journal, to be published in France next year, and was awarded a grant by the Texts Division of the National Endowment for the Humanities' Division of Research Programs to see the project to completion. During this period she wrote an article, "Ut Pictura Poesis: Delacroix and the Sublime," to appear in Essays in Honor of Wesley Trimpi, ed. K. Eden and S. Shankman, and also gave a paper entitled "Painting and the Journal of Eugène Delacroix" at the colloquium "Painting as Narrative" held at the Institute of Romance Studies, London.

 tirelessly,

During the past year James Higginbotham (Fellow 1976-78, 1979-80) gave several lectures, including the Henry Sweet Lecture at the meeting of the Linguistics Association of Great Britain, a symposium contribution to the Joint Sessions of the Aristotelian Society and the Mind Association, and his inaugural lecture as Professor of General Linguistics at Oxford, the last of which has been published as a booklet by the Clarendon Press. There were other published papers, including "Mass and Count Quantifiers" in Linguistics and Philosophy. He has been elected a Fellow of the British Academy from July 1995.
New York University's Ronnie Po-chia Hsia (Fellow 1982-84) was awarded a Humboldt Fellowship for the Max-Planck-Institut für Geschichte in Göttingen. He spent the summer and fall of 1995 at the Research Center for Religion and Society at the University of Amsterdam.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

During 1994-95, Robert Holzer (Fellow 1990-92) was a Visiting Lecturer at the School of Music of the University of Washington. He read papers at departmental colloquia at the University of British Columbia and Princeton University, at the Spring Meeting of the Northwest Chapter of the American Musicological Society, and at the Annual Meeting of the Society for Seventeenth-Century Music. He has published reviews in Notes and Renaissance Quarterly and contributed an article on the poetics of Monteverdi's late music to the volume The Sense of Marino, ed. Francesco Guardiani (Ottawa, 1994).

Eric Huberman (Fellow 1991-93) continues to travel to Western and Eastern Europe giving seminars on the challenge of aligning vocation with the inner being. His book: Courage, Commitment, and Career will appear in October 1995 (Inner Traditions) under his pen name of Rick Jarow.

For the next two years, Professor Huberman will be teaching in the department of religion at Vassar College where he has taught a number of the courses and seminars that he created while at the Society of Fellows, including the poetics of the sacred. He is currently working on his next book, Fractured Lives, a cross-cultural study on religious encounters with love and loss.

In 1994-95 David Johnson (Fellow 1979-81) published Ritual and Scripture in Chinese Popular Religion: Five Studies. His chapter in it is called "Mu-lien in Pao-Ch'üan: The Performance Context and Religious Meaning of the Yu-ming Pao-ch'üan." This is the final publication of the Chinese Popular Culture Project, of which Dr. Johnson is the founder and director. He also published a long article in a Taiwan journal, Min-su Ch'ü-i, called "Temple Festivals in Southeastern Shangi."
As for campus activities, his biggest job was chairing a committee to do the basic conceptual planning for a new East Asian Library and East Asian studies center at Berkeley. The committee's report was approved in early May.

During 1994-95 three books by Eloise Quiñones Keber (Fellow 1984-86) appeared: one co-edited, Mixteca-Puebla: Discoveries and Research in Mesoamerican Art and Archaeology, and one edited, Chipping Away on Earth: Studies in Prehispanic and Colonial Mexico in Honor of Arthur J.O. Anderson and Charles E. Dibble (both Labyrinthos Press, 1994); and one authored, Codex Telleriano-Remensis: Ritual, Divination, and History in a Pictorial Aztec Manuscript (University of Texas Press, 1995). She also presented two papers "Humboldt and Aztec Art," at the College Art Association meeting in San Antonio and "Constructing a Nahua Cosmology in the Codex Vaticanus A" at the XVII Congreso Internacional de Historia de las Religiones en Mexico City. She continues to teach Pre-Columbian art history at Baruch College and at The Graduate Center of the City University of New York.

Muhammad Ali Khalidi (Fellow 1991-93) has completed the second year of a three-year fellowship at the University of Chicago. He is increasingly interested in philosophical issues arising out of psychology and cognitive science and is working on an article on concepts, as viewed by philosophers and psychologists. His book manuscript, Conceptual Change is under consideration at Routledge and an article on "Incommensurability" will appear in Blackwell's Companion to the Philosophy of Science, ed. W.H. Newton-Smith.
Last quarter, Dr. Khalidi taught a course on the subject of concepts in the Philosophy Department at Chicago, and he continued to teach in the humanities core curriculum. During 1994-95, he gave talks at the American University of Beirut, Birzeit University in Palestine, and the University of California on the topics of incommensurability, the right of national self-determination, and concepts.

Conrad Leyser (Fellow 1992-93) has taken up a permanent position in the Department of History at the University of Manchester (England). The manuscript of his book, Let Flesh Retire: Monasticism and Authority in the World of Pope Gregory the Great, to be published by Oxford University Press, is in its final stages of completion. In the meantime, he has begun work on a new project on eleventh-century Europe, writing an article "Cities of the Plain: the Rhetoric of Sodomy in Peter Damian’s Book of Gomorrah which appeared in a special issue of the Romantic Review in May 1995.

Marie-Rose Logan (Fellow 1975-77) is editor of Annals of Scholarship, An International Quarterly in the Humanities and Social Sciences. She lectured in Germany at the Colloquium on Thomas More, in Boston on the history of the Classical tradition, and at Long Island University in Southampton on Anaïs Nin. She teaches in the Modern Languages Department at Goucher College in Baltimore.

Over the past academic year, David A.J. Macey (Fellow 1976-78), professor of History and C.V. Starr Professor of Russian Studies at Middlebury College, has managed to survive a craniotomy to remove a cyst pressing on his optic nerve and a couple of subsequent and potentially life-threatening adrenaline storms brought on by an undetected, postoperatively non-functioning pituitary. Meanwhile, two of his articles have appeared and another is about to appear: "Agricultural Reform and Political Change: The Case of Stolypin" in Reform in Modern Russian History: Progress or Cycle? ed. Theodore Taranovski. (New York: Cambridge University Press, 1995); "Is Agrarian Privatization the Right Path? A

In May of last year, Dr. Macey attended a conference on "The Russian Philosophical Tradition as a Source for Reformulating Public Values in Russia Today" in Bergamo, Italy; and in November, he attended the annual convention of the American Association for Advancement of Slavic Studies in Philadelphia where he participated in a roundtable on "Institutions in Late Imperial Russia" and commented on a panel on the "Political Economy of Agrarian Reform in Russia Today." He also organized a panel on "State, Zemstvo, and Local Government in the Era of the Stolypin Agrarian Reforms 1906-1916" for the August 1995 Fifth World Congress for Central and East European Studies, in Warsaw, where he also presented a paper. Through it all, he taught two lecture courses and two seminars with the burden of five due to a program of first-year seminars that combines traditional content with intensive writing and then a continuing writing for sophomores that is taught in tandem with a lecture course.

Next year, in addition to continuing as Program Director of Russian and East European Studies, he will chair Middlebury's Department of Russian as well as become Director of Study Abroad, continue sitting on a half-dozen or more ad-hoc and standing committees, and administer Fulbright and NSEP scholarship committees which seem continuously to produce at least one winning student each from Middlebury College. However, he will only be teaching one lecture (substantially revised in form and content) and a new seminar on comparative reforms in Russian and Soviet history.

Susan Manning's (Fellow 1987-88) first book, Ecstasy and the Demon: Feminism and Nationalism in the Dances of Mary Wigman, won the 1994 de la Torre Bueno Prize, given annually by the Dance Perspectives Foundation to the year's most important contribution to dance studies. In June 1994 Professor Manning received tenure at Northwestern, and since then she has been working on a second book provisionally titled Making an American Dance, 1930-1965. The book will examine the formation of a national identity for American dance at mid-century in relation to changing images of the male and female dancer, black and white dance, and high and low dance. In October 1994 she launched her new project with a paper delivered at the American Studies Association on Martha Graham's American Document, a longer version of which will appear in a forthcoming anthology Rethinking Dance. For 1995-96 she accepted an NEH/Newberry Library fellowship and an NEH travel grant (and declined an ACLS fellowship).

Richard McCoy (Fellow 1977-79) is combining a Guggenheim Fellowship with a sabbatical leave to begin work on a book on literary reactions to "the cease of majesty" during the Renaissance. He is spending part of the year in England. His older daughter, who was born during his first year of the Mellon Fellowship, starts college this fall, having reached the age of students he first taught in Literature Humanities.

Suzanne Nalbantian (Fellow 1976-79) is currently editing a volume of essays for Macmillan LTD on Anaïs Nin's literary writings to be entitled Anaïs Nin: Literary Perspectives. These essays are drawn from a conference she organized in May 1994 at the Southampton campus of Long Island University. Professor Nalbantian presented a paper entitled "The Impact of European Symbolism on Virginia Woolf" at the 1994 MLA Conference in San Diego. She also gave a lecture, "How Facts Become Fiction in Proust, Joyce, and Woolf" for the Fales Colloquium at New York University in March 1995. Both lectures stem from her recent book, Aesthetic Autobiography.

In July 1993 Gülru Necipoğlu (Fellow 1986) was promoted from John L. Loeb Associate Professor in the Fine Arts Department of Harvard University to the named chair, Aga Khan Professor of Islamic Art and Architecture. She spent 1993-94 in Turkey doing NLH supported research for her forthcoming book on Ottoman architecture and urbanism in the age of Siron. During the 1994-95 academic year she began teaching again and completed her second book, The Topkapi Scroll: Geometry and Ornament in Islamic Architecture, due next fall in the Sketchbooks and Albums series of The Getty Center in the History of Art and the Humanities. She also guest edited volume 23 of Ars Orientalis, a special issue on Pre-Modern Islamic Palaces.

During the 1994-95 academic year, David L. Pike (Fellow 1993-95) presented six papers: "The Underground of Law N' Order: Fritz Lang's M," in the Angel of History series "Policing New York and Other Places,*" sponsored by the Department of Anthropology (Columbia) and Theatre (Barnard); "Bernardus Silvestris' Descent into the Classics: the Commentary on the First Six Books of the Aeneid," the International Society for the Classical Tradition, Boston University; "Representations of Urban Modernity," panel presentation at the Society of Fellows brown bag lunch series with Carla Cappetti and William Sharpe (Fellow 1981-83); "Streetwalking, Underground London, and Conrad's Urban Vision," International Conference on "Conrad’s Century" at the Center for Conrad Studies, Kent State

Much of Dr. Pike's time over the year was devoted to the completion of a book, Rousing the World Below: Modern and Medieval Descents, which will be published by Cornell University Press. He will spend the summer in London, where he will participate in an NEH summer Seminar on "The Culture of London, 1850-1925," and conduct research on urban modernism. He also received a travel grant from the American Council of Learned Societies to participate in the BCLA Conference in Edinburgh. As a Mellon Fellow in French and Comparative Literature, Dr. Pike taught an advanced undergraduate seminar on "The City and the Underground in Literature and Film: London, Paris, and Berlin, 1900-40." He also taught two sections of Literature Humanities, and conducted a compus-wide review session for Columbia Television. In the fall, he will take up an appointment as Assistant Professor of Literature and Film at American University.

John Rogers (Fellow 1989-90) is an Assistant Professor of English at Yale University. His book, The Matter of Revolution: The Poetics of Agency and Organization in the Age of Milton, is forthcoming from Cornell University Press. He is currently writing a book on English Renaissance romance, and another, on Milton, tentatively titled Milton's Body. For Fall 1995, he will be teaching for the Yale in London program at the Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art.

During her second year at the Society of Fellows, Ginger Strand (Fellow 1993-95) taught two sections of Literature Humanities and a seminar for the English Department, "Author and Audience in Early America," which she designed. She presented papers at The City College and at the Institute for Early American History and Culture conference at the University of Michigan, but spent most of her time working on her book, The Theater and the Republic. A version of the final chapter of this study was awarded the 1995 Amy and Eric Burger Theater Essay Prize. She also has a paper on Percy Shelley's Cenci, co-authored with Sarah Zimmerman, forthcoming in European Romantic Review.

Franciscus Verellen (Fellow 1987-89) is currently completing his third and final year as head of the Taipei Center of the Ecole Francaise d'Extreme-Orient. The Center's activities this year include the organization of an international conference, "The Cult of Saints and the Cult of Sites: Sources of Chinese Local History and Hagiography," to be held in May/June in Paris.
In the coming academic year, Professor Verellen will be based at the EFEO in Paris while teaching as Visiting Professor (Directeur d'études associé) in the Religious Studies Section of the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, Sorbonne. Recent publications include Mythologie des Taoïsme, fascicle 25 in E. Schmalzriedt and H.W. Haussig eds., Wörterbuch der Mythologie (Stuttgart: Klett-Cotta Verlag, 1994) and Buddhism in Chinese Society: An Economic History by Jacques Gernet, translated and revised by F. Verellen (New York: Columbia University Press, 1995).

In the 1994-95 academic year, Alicyn Warren (Fellow 1993-95) taught a section of Music Humanities, and in the spring term gave a course of her own devising, entitled "Music and Sound in Film." She gave a talk as part of a panel devoted to the topic of "Music Affect" at the Society for Music Theory’s annual meeting, held in Tallahassee, Florida in November; delivered a paper entitled "Hearing Fictional Worlds" at the University of Maryland at College Park in March; organized a States of the Disciplines: "Music" brown bag at the Society of Fellows in March; and gave a brown bag presentation titled "Sound On--and Off--Screen" to the Columbia Department of Music in April. She serves on the steering committee for a new special interest group on "Music and Philosophy" within the Society for Music Theory.

In September 1994, Dr. Warren was appointed Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Virginia. UVA has awarded her a research grant for the summer of 1995, to aid completion of her book project.
